Project Title: Yosemite National Park Website

I want the website to be a multipage website with each page focusing on a slightly different aspect of Yosemite. The subcategories are pretty large, so there won't be many pages to navigate between, but I still want to have some form of global nav to move between different sections.

- Home Page: This page may have a general bio about Yosemite along with a photo or grid of photos.
- History: This page will discuss the history of the land that makes up Yosemite and how it came to be a national park. This page's imagery will be the most unique as it will likely be older (more film photos). I may also include a map or two to give geographical context.
- Habitats: This section will cover the different habitats and ecosystems that are in the park. There is a variety of wildlife as well as plants that are native to the area and are part of what makes Yosemite such a notable park. This section will also be image-heavy.
- Geology: This section may be a bit more brief, but will discuss the history of the rock formations that have created the massive valley so many people come to visit and explore. It may include some images or diagrams.
- Activities: This section will cover the variety of things to do inside the park. From backpacking to rock climbing to biking, there is no shortage of recreational activities. This section will use photos and possibly maps of hikes and trails.
